INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS
AND INTERNATIONAL DISPUTE
SETTLEMENT
Trends and Prospects

Edited by
Laurence Boisson de Charzournes
Cesare Romano
Ruth Mackenzie

The increasing number of international organizations and institutions in every area of international cooperation is a noticeable characteristic of the current international legal order at the beginning of the twenty first century. A related development is the multiplication of international dispute settlement bodies and procedures.

The aim of this book is to analyze the interface between these two significant developments. While there are a variety of possible points of interaction, one key issue addressed throughout this book is the role of the relationship between international organizations and international dispute settlement bodies in the promotion of the rule of law at the international level.

This book contains the thoughts of academics, judges and international civil servants on crucial issues. It is an extremely timely work that will be of interest to officers of international organizations, as well as to practitioners and scholars interested in international litigation and dispute settlement.
